ARCHITECTURE OF FAITH The largest Muslim center of worship in the world is now rising on a seaside village in Cotabato City. Due to be completed in October, its construction on a 5-hectare land donated by Rep. Dingon Dilangalen is funded by Sultan Hassanol Bolkiah of Brunei and will be named after him. The masjid is also a reaffirmation and celebration of the 15-year relationship between the Philippines and the Sultanate of Brunei that brought His Majesty here on a three-day visit that ended peacefully. Aside from the mosque, sports and education facilities will complete the complex. Its grand features are the 16 gold-painted domes and four minarets rising 88 meters or 15-story high.

Kampi softens on merger

GMA party forms panel for unity talks with Lakas

By TJ Burgoa and Laila B. Salaverria

AFTER EXPRESSING INITIAL QUALMS, THE PRESIDENT of the Kabalikang Malayang Pilipino (Kampi) has agreed to name the party members who will engage in merger talks with Lakas-CMD.

Committee for Rep. Luis Villaharta has committed to appoint four representatives to the national coordination and unification committee, according to Gabriel Claudio, the committee chair and President Masagapi-Arroyo's political adviser.

"That's an indication that [Kampi] is ready to sit down and talk," Claudio said yesterday in a phone interview. "This [merger] is not a mission impossible."

Only on Friday, Villaharta said a "genuine problem" would make the Lakas-Kampi merger ordered by his Arroyo a difficult task.

"How can you settle an irreconcilable and an immovable object?" he had said of the two administration parties.

But Prospero Pichay, the spokesperson of Lakas and its vice president for Mindanao, previously shunned off Villaharta's overtures.

"He's an astute negotiator," Pichay said of Villaharta. "He wants an equitable merger with Lakas. It's the

Kidnappers told: Join coop to get 'ransom' of livelihood

By Julia Alpala in Zamboanga City and Laila B. Salaverria in Manila

ZAMBOANGA CITY—THE KIDNAPPERS of three workers of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) have to organize themselves into a cooperative before they can be granted livelihood assistance and development programs, Sen. Greg Abadador told lawmakers.

"We are willing to give them what they want, such as livelihood assistance, but they should be organized," he told the lawmakers by phone. "They should form a cooperative and then have it registered. They should also attend evening [classes] and seminars after doing so."

This was a turnaround from the governor's earlier tough stance, when he described the kidnappers' request for livelihood assistance as "equal to, or even more than, a ransom demand."

Last week, Sen. Vice Gov. Nur Aron Soladilla said the kidnappers of Andrew Moton of Switzerland, Giorgio Vaghi of Italy and Mary Jean Lacaba of the Philippines wanted livelihood assistance, and not money, in exchange for the captives' freedom.

Soladilla stated the captives and spoke with the kidnappers in an unattended area in Indonesia, India, or Wednesday afternoon.

MORE THAN STATE RECEPTIONS and grand rituals, a cultural complex rising in a serene waterfront site in Cotabato City showcases the 25-year relationship between the Philippines and the Sultanate of Brunei that brought Sultan Hassanol Bolkiah on a three-day state visit here this week.

The Sultan, who left the country yesterday, is funding the construction of what will be the largest Muslim place of worship in the country at a cost of $48 million.

The Sultan Hassanol Bolkiah Masjid

(Muslim center of worship), located in the seaside village of Lumbani, occupies 1.7 hectares of a 5-hectare complex that when completed, will also include education and sports facilities.

With its shimmering gold-plated domes and tall, slender minarets reaching up to the sky, the mosque symbolizes the very best expression of the Muslim faith in the country and the aspirations of a long-neglected region, said the designer architect Felino Palafox Jr.

"Our inspiration is our own aspiration for an Islamic unity in the country and our Muslim brothers. We hope that the masjid will stimulate economic

Expression of regret

OUR REPORTER DE ZAMORA expressed her regret in offering the findings of the Iglesia leadership when she wrote in a news report on Aug. 23, 2003 that Sen. Greg Abadador claimed an alleged "Pope-ban" ruse in the Iglesia in Global Central Office. Senator Hassan was at the time being sought by authorities in connection with the so-called Ombudsman-Munoz. Zamora also admitted that she has no personal knowledge of the matters in her report and that she relied solely on intelligence sources.

World Vision: 9,000 donors sought for 9,000 school kids

By Eden C. Tancoco Jr.

IN A YEAR PREDICTED TO BE DIFFICULT because of the global economic recession, a non-governmental group that sends thousands of children to school is urging Filipinos to give more. The initial reaction of many people to the crisis is to save money for themselves, World Vision Philippines official in charge Joy Alvarez said yesterday.

"But what about those who have nothing to save?" she pointed out. This year, World Vision Philippines hopes to receive 9,000 new sponsors to help send more poor children to school.

Alvarez said the financial turmoil would be "very difficult for everybody, but more so for the poor."

Thanks to the generosity of major companies, celebrities and private individuals, the group has helped more than 125,000 school children in the past year in the country.

One beneficiary is 6-year-old Janice, a Grade 1 student from Cavite. Her parents are separated and her mother with needles to send him and his three siblings to school.

Workers say crisis action plan favors capitalists

By Roberto L. Manan

A LABOR GROUP TESTIMONIAL slammed the signature action plan drawn up by representatives of the government, labor and employers on Friday, saying it was drafted in favor of capitalist interests.

The People's Movement (PM) said the action plan will do little to help ing workers.

PM said the representatives agreed upon during last week's Tripartite Action Conference on the Global Financial Crisis (GFC) were "biased" and

"skewed" to benefit the capitalists.

"The action plan is heavy on reducing the cost of doing business for the capitalists but silent on lowering the cost of living for the workers. These were proposals on tax cuts for businesses but none on a tax rebate for workers," the organization said in a statement.

PM said the Department of Labor and Employment's emergency initiatives, namely, the livelihood assistance and training programs for workers were not enough.

Funding inefficient

The DOE's Worker's Income Support Program (WISP), a small business lending mechanism for low-income families, is inefficient and funding approval takes months, the PM said.

PM said the P300 offered by WISP was "too small" and would be consumed in a month's time by the families' basic necessities.

PM is pushing for a "basic" package composed of bigger cash advances for displaced workers to meet their purchasing power and open the economy.

According to DOE data, about 16,000 displaced workers have been affected by the global financial crisis. DOE and industry players predict that more workers will lose their jobs this year.

At the tripartite meeting, the private sector, employers and labor representatives promised to cooperate with each other to save jobs. The parties agreed to provide accurate data on unemployment and called for the facilitation of loans and grants to displaced workers.

Tax cuts, smaller fees

The business sector also called on the government to look into ways of making the business environment easier for firms. They asked for tax cuts, reduced holding pay and smaller fees, by doing business.

On Friday, labor Secretary Estelita Reyes announced a P400-million DOE fund to help the jobless. The money, he said, will be in the form of a "grant" to workers who want to build their own businesses.

He also announced that the Department of Budget and Management was releasing another P300 million to DOE for worker financial assistance.

The labor department has urged workers to check out and register with the department's job match site, www.philjob.net or its newsletter Search. The site aims to match workers' skills with available jobs.

The labor chief also said the department had activated a 24/7 Global Financial Crisis Hotline (0271027) to help workers and respond to their questions.

Aurora town mayor freed, must show gun license

By Julie N. Arellano

POLICE RELEASED LAKE FREDAN, Aurora town mayor, after they had taken into custody two law-abiding citizens and a bodyguard for having high-powered firearms in his vehicle in Quezon City. Mayor Francisco Morera (brother of the Quezon City Police Director's Criminal Investigation and Detection Unit, said Vice Mayor Briones, 55, and the others were released on condition they would return within three days to the police station.

Briones, Mayor of Davao in his previous position, his aide, Retired Colonel and Mayor Lina, and bodyguard POC Alvin (alias) were taken into custody Friday afternoon.

Found in the mayor's Toyota Land Cruiser were two AR-15 rifles, a 9-mm and a .40-cal. pistol. The vehicles were pulled in front of a restaurant on Bataan Road.

The mayor told police the AR-15 and pistol was his and that he would return with the papers showing it was in his possession.

"We will give them until next week to produce the documents for the firearms," Briones said.

"If by then they had not given us the documents, then we might charge them with illegal possession of firearms," he said.

Briones said a concerned citizen alerted them to the firearms in the vehicle.

The mayor and his party did not resist arrest and registered the firearms with the mayor's permission as he had supposedly been receiving death threats.

Sulu sultan asserts rights over Sabah

By Erik S. Suter

THE SULTAN OF SULTAN Wednesday declared it would assert its property rights over Sabah (formerly North Borneo) regardless of the unresolved territorial dispute between the Philippines and Malaysia.

Sultan Hassan Ali Shah II said he had entered into an agreement with foreign companies to develop Sabah, especially in oil and gas, to give his property rights.

In a speech at the Manila Pavilion Hotel in Manila, the sultan said, "I am getting old and the work is too long and so I decided to sign a development contract with some legitimate foreign companies to develop our property."

He said he had sent copies of the contract to the Malaysian prime minister to inform him "that we mean to exercise our rights as stipulated by the British high court of Borneo (in 1908)." Sabah was handed to the British North Borneo Co. in 1908 by the Sultanate of Sulu. It was made part of the Sultanate of Malaysia in 1963 after the British granted it independence.

The Philippines' president said Sabah is part of it in this time. Sabah's foreign companies to give property rights to the sultan.

The sultan's new and rapid economic recovery, Sultan Hassan, explained that "we will exercise ownership regardless of what government wants (Sabah)."

He said they will not question the sovereignty of Sabah because it is "unquestioned."

The sultan's claim limited the nearly 6,000 Malaya papers in annual tax for Sabah to pay to the U.S. 11 billion pesos of revenue the territory generates for the Malaysian government.

In the same forum, the sultan said they will support peace treaty between Malaysia and Sabah.

Atienza orders stop to new mining projects in south Palawan

MANILA—President Gloria Arroyo's Executive Order No. 100, signed last week, has ordered a moratorium on new mining projects in south Palawan and vowed to set up a law to bar the area's largest ecological haven, the Mt. Mansueto National Range, declared as a protected area.

Atienza, who visited the capital to preside over the opening of the Palawan Council for Sustainable Development, said the order was in response to an earlier resolution passed by the provincial government calling for a 25-year mining moratorium in the province.

"Palawan is the country's last frontier in tourism as well as biodiversity, so we need to ensure its sustainable development," said Atienza.

"Let's imagine a moratorium on mining to give Palawan some breathing space."

The order effectively puts a halt to at least 10 large-scale mining rights applications to be considered by the Mt. Mansueto National Range.

Atienza's visit to the province was part of a series of stops to promote the province's tourism and biodiversity.

Atienza, 67, said the province is a treasure trove of natural resources. "We need to give Palawan some breathing space," he said.

TNT tries to worm out of 0-2 hole vs Alaska

By Hwang B. Castillo

CHOT REYES DOESN'T BELIEVE THAT HE needs to prove the game feature just about none.

In fact, he's laid down a simple premise for his TNT 'N' two over night back-to-back series. "What we need to do is get some balance of playing with a senior or veteran while keeping the focus," Reyes told the business personality after games. "It's never done to prove the public before we might really prove it in the process."

many times had 10-0-0-0 in the first round of events since with the Arm for the RBC Philippine Cup at the Astoria Coliseum at 5 tonight, hoping that his main game will finally be able to find their needs.

"We need to get Jimmy (Calvo) and Mac (Carandang) showing well," Reyes said while pointing out to the two guards combined 7-of-40 shooting from three-point range in the first two games of the series.

"I need to win without that kind of shooting," he stressed. "If you can recall, in Game 6 against San Miguel, Jimmy and Mac shot seven three-pointers each. And that was in just one game. These kids have that sense in two games for themselves."

That could probably be a tribute to how well the two have played. Jimmy and Carandang are defense, bringing different man-on-man-to-man to get themselves into the game and back.

The defense of the Arm has held down the Blazers to just 93.3 points a contest, a far cry from the 100 points they displayed in the Final Four where they scored just the 104-point mark in each of the six games against the Blazers.

Holocaust denier apologizes to Pope

VATICAN CITY—A BISHOP RECENTLY REHABILITATED by Pope Benedict XVI has expressed regret to the Pontiff for the "damned and painful" war caused by denying the Holocaust. (See photo on Page A19).

In a letter to the Vatican, Bishop Richard Williamson, who recently denied in a TV interview that 6 million Jews were murdered during the Holocaust, asked his remarks "forgotten."

The letter was posted on Feb. 1 on Williamson's personal blog and addressed to Cardinal Carlo Caffarra, who has been dealing with the rehabilitation of Williamson and other fringe Catholics who had been censured.

The Holocaust denial had incited Jewish groups and many others. It was not immediately clear if Williamson's letter, which contained an apology for the content of his remarks, would mean that war.

"Would this tremendous media storm stirred up by ignorant minds of hate on Swedish television, I beg of you to accept, only as a properly respectful, my sincere regret for having caused so yourself and to the holy Father in such an unnecessary distress and problem," Williamson wrote.

Pope spokesperson the Rev.

WILLIAMSON

Frances Lombardi said he had "nothing to say about this issue. Everyone can realize it as they see it."

Lombardi said he didn't know if the Pope or the Pontiff had seen it.

The bishop in the letter also asked the Pope his "sincere personal thanks" for lifting the excommunication.

The Vatican had imposed the Church's most severe discipline, excommunication, on Williamson and three other bishops 20 years ago because they had been elected to bishop's rank by a fringe, ultra-conservative group, the late Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre.

In his letter to the Pope, Williamson promised to "offer a Mass" for Benedict and Cardinal Lombardi.

Earlier on Friday, Williamson said to the Holy See, Monday, Feb. 1, and the Archbishop said he had no personal relationship with the Pope.

The late Archbishop Lefebvre, who founded the ultra-conservative Society of St. Pius, which Lefebvre founded because he rejected the modernizing reforms of the Second Vatican Council in the 1960s.

On Wednesday, Benedict expressed what he called his "astonished" solidarity with Jews and issued a rare warning against any denial of the full horror of the Nazi genocide.

In a letter dated on Thursday, some 50 Catholic members of the US Congress wrote to Benedict to express their "deep concern" over the Pope's decision to reinstate Williamson while the bishop was saying that the Holocaust occurred.

"We do not question your intention for revoking the excommunication of Bishop Williamson or your right to do so, but we do understand why the announcement was not accompanied by an explicit public rejection of his denial of the Holocaust," the letter said.

The bishop's remarks about the Holocaust "to the shame of two-Peoples, Jewish, Christian, Muslim and others who have suffered and who have been persecuted and who have been persecuted among people of all races and situations," the lawmakers said, adding that they reaffirmed Benedict's reputation of solidarity with the Jewish people.

Benedict visited Philadelphia during a pilgrimage to the United States last spring. AP

US stimulus plan meets stiff resistance in Senate

WASHINGTON—SENATE RE-PROBATION and even some Democrats are pressing for big changes to the $787 billion economic stimulus package the House passed this week, adding the danger for a breaking debate over tax cuts and spending that will not be the Obama White House.

The demand for major changes comes amid mounting criticism from some Democrats that the bill does not focus tightly enough on government programs that will quickly create jobs or cut the budget that will spark spending by consumers and businesses.

Now a single Republican would be the first to vote for the bill that the Democratic-controlled House approved this week. But with the economy in great trouble, some House Republicans clearly want to find a way to support the bill, and President Barack Obama wants a strong bipartisan vote to show his ability to build consensus.

Republicans and some prominent Democrats said they would push to add or expand measures to prop up the collapsed housing market, which was a major cause of the recession. Democratic leaders said they were open to the idea, including a $11.6-billion credit for homebuyers.

Republicans said they would put forward numerous amendments, especially broader and deeper tax cuts, and efforts to strip out some major spending provisions that support long-term goals of Obama and congressional Democrats but may not provide a quick job to the economy.

The Republicans also said they intended to remove several provisions that they say attack of special-interest pet projects, including disaster insurance for honey producers.

At a strategy session on Thursday with Obama's top economic adviser, Lawrence H. Summers, Democrats and the White House agreed to allow full debate on the stimulus in the Senate rather than try to pass the bill through with a small margin of victory. At a minimum, Democrats need at least one House Republican if they are to meet the 50-vote threshold to pass any legislation.

Already the Senate version of the bill is substantially different from the House package, including a provision to protect millions of middle-class Americans from having to pay the six-year mortgage tax in 2009, which helps the real estate of the House bill to nearly double. Reconciling the two versions will require further negotiations with House leaders at the Senate side. If the debate is reported to last through next week. NYT

An old friend from Singapore once told me that, in running a business, you must manage the intangible P&L (Profit & Loss) first. What I've done is to give equal importance to the discipline of financial reporting and analysis, and people management. The best advice I received is from Mr. John G. Kennedy in 1979. He helped me in the financing for the purchase of the property from the Assumption from a hotel name for GIC. Mr. John said, you must properly manage the terms of your financing in the type of assets you wish to acquire. Since real estate is long-term and illiquid, you must be able to cover interest payments over a long period of time and in a history of economic downturns. He would not have the global crisis if it didn't have been followed by Mr. John G. Kennedy.

Breeding Winners In The Sports Arena And Beyond

"GREAT THINGS START from small beginnings," this line from the iconic MGLD single is the inspiration behind the new MGLD communication drive, Building Champions In Life. "Real" and "spiral" looking as other Filipino kids, the children featured in the brand's new TV commercial represent the small beginnings where future champions could sprout.

Decades ago, how do you believe that every child has a great potential and the best way to unleash this is through the experience of sports. From training to competition, even to victory or defeat, he or she learns skills to become an amazing athlete. More importantly, the child is also exposed to important values to help succeed in everyday life.

New MGLD Ambassador

In most of its communication campaigns through the years, MGLD has been featuring champions that could serve as good role models. Among them are tennis player Queen Julia De Vega, gymnast and Olympic star Larus, and basketball NBA Games Gold Medalist Jerry Sumando. The 2008, Chris Tiu is the latest addition to the prestigious roster of MGLD Ambassadors. This basketball champion won a gold medal when he won the 2008

Asian Games, to win the 2008 MGLD men's basketball championship. The value matters line more legendary and enduring is how he is off court. Chris living, good son, wholesome family life, proponent, coach is basketball, an ambassador for youth leadership and public education, these are just some of the qualities and attributes that make Chris qualify as one of the MGLD ambassadors.

"It's an honor for me to be chosen as one of the ambassadors because the theme of MGLD is something that I perfectly agree with, developing the youth and creating champions in life through sports. There's just perfect for me because I'm an athlete, I truly believe that sports is a metaphor for life and it's like a winning game for the soul game called life," says Chris.

Chris embodies the theme of MGLD's go-go-go spirit and are that the belief that sports is an effective vehicle in building champions while teaching children values they need to win in life. There's no better individual to help us get this crucial message across than Chris, who personified the attributes of a true champion," says Paula De Vega, MGLD Executive Manager and MGLD Ambassador.

While he's concerned about the notion that he's a role model, Chris says he doesn't feel any pressure or difficulty associated with it. "I don't have to pretend to be somebody I'm not. I just try to be my best in everything whether it's basketball, football, studies, or even relationships with other people so it's not like I have time up according to expectations," says Chris.

The Making Of A Champion

Like most champions though, Chris' ascent to a successful and successful basketball star did not come overnight.

His love affair with basketball began when he was 5 years old. "My family and I would play basketball together in the park and even after that, I would go to the park by myself, shoot some hoops, play with the neighbors," recalls Chris. His more serious involvement in the MGLD B.E.S.T. Center when he was seven, which helped him hone his basketball skills. "I was very into basketball," says Chris.

breakout soon after. Chris helped Junior School grab the MGLD SBP and Shambhavi Silver Hoops, respectively.

Chris credits the support of his parents as one of the keys to his success. "When I started in basketball, my parents were because I wanted them wanted that I might though basketball that Chris discovered values that helped develop and strengthen his character both as an athlete and as a person. "There are so many values to be learned from basketball like hard work, perseverance and discipline," Chris says. Basketball is also a good training for life," says Chris. He says, "I learned the value of teamwork through actively participating in basketball and I learned that I should be a good team player."

Chris' success in basketball is not just a result of his talent but also of his hard work and dedication. "I have been training and it's hard for me to get over a loss because I get so emotionally involved in the game," Chris says. "I have been training and it's hard for me to get over a loss because I get so emotionally involved in the game," Chris says. "I have been training and it's hard for me to get over a loss because I get so emotionally involved in the game," Chris says.

Chris' journey to becoming a champion was not without challenges. "I have been training and it's hard for me to get over a loss because I get so emotionally involved in the game," Chris says. "I have been training and it's hard for me to get over a loss because I get so emotionally involved in the game," Chris says. overcome them to allow me to try out and when I made the team, they would cheer my parents, well for me, and after that, we'd go home together from school and they would cheer me, cheer my parents and they would be proud of me."

CHRIS TIU MGLD BEST CONTRIBUTOR

Chris is a great role model for young Filipinos.

Scoring Values

Encouraging his parents for the game, Chris says he loves basketball because it's fun. "You get to play with other people, there's competition, you always want to be better than your opponent and you get to play with friends," says Chris.

Generations Of Champions
Chris joins Ajay Sumando and the Philippines No. 1 Basketball Team in the MGLD campaign. Back of them lives the life of a champion worthy of adoration and emulation. As Chris, Nene, and Ajay inspire the new generation of youth to become winners in sports and in life, MGLD will continue to provide the training, encouragement and support to help them become champions in life.

The charter of India is a one-of-a-kind wonder in the metropolis. It's a May Garden that walks around IM North in Black in the Amos.

It's a good sign that even small developers are trying to create a natural landscape—a vast expanse of greenery that should give weary urbanites a chance to breathe. More bluffs is a veritable promise for us.

Spanning almost 16,000 sq m, it will be fixed and covered with moss and vegetation—perfect for absorbing the smog around it. A waterfall (man-made, of course) is at the end of this window, too.

Small rooms and veritas in dark glass and steel joinery will be to the Sky Garden.

The counterpart of this development is an amphibious with a slightly offset. Designed to be the prime runner across of the north, it will have pneumatic tires, which should make it quite a sight to sight.

Rockwell, Ortigas.

A clean break from all the anxieties.

This is urban planning to turn a city green. Think of resort-inspired living complete with a waterfall, groves of trees, kar ponds, zen gardens, private plunge pools, miles of jogging paths, bike trails and more inspiring features.

It's having a sure thing that's quite refreshing. From rock solid Rockwell.

Make way for 'Jay' in RP

a very powerful message told in a unique way. That sums up the effects of the journey in Manila. If you like what you've adapted, then you remember that all the films in that festival either do "unique things" to the battle scenes down to how that unique story is told—does the film offer a unique viewing experience?

Lawrence and Dante Manalang offer that unique viewing experience. I was very honored to be the one who brought the MTVD tapes of "Mulan Chika" to Manila. The film eventually won the Best Feature Film award and became the most popular in attendance film because that they represented a team.

"Jay" was last year's Best Film at the Cinemaya Independent Film Festival.

Which accounts at these film back with sound not in your mind?

That is not our target with it. We're doing it, who was inspired to document the event, most nights inside the Sala Grande, the main theater where the film will be shown. I talked David with the film and we recorded about the film showing if we can with the cameras again to be on the spot with. They all agreed. The festival programme laughed about we were re-creating a moment. He said, "This is very fine" indeed it is.

The other independent moment was at the Bangkok International Film Festival. I was the first one to be asked to review the Special Screenings award. The premiere screening was at the back of the audience. I didn't know where to sit. I stood up and went to the premiere to review the award. I was asked to shake her hand but my camera said we are just here to interview so we're a good thing. I didn't shake her hand because that last has other photo-credit with regard to the responsibility.

My favorite of the festival is the new in London. I was the only Filipino in the festival. They were so interested in the film. I was interviewed by the BBC. I thought it was going to be a special episode. I was broadcast live. My father was also in with it. I started. A chairman asked me: "Where are you?" That film is being shown on BBC. "Where, Manila, C." I said, "London, C." and was on the BBC getting ready for the interview. They were shocked once I was on screen during the interview.

Given Manila and the Salangs were really good film.

Given was a natural life choice to read the script. Instead, he chose to read the film. Instead, he chose to read the film. Instead, he chose to read the film.

Flur Salangs is an idea of film-making. The idea is to make it a movie where a Catholic priest applies to his last film because it was his last film. He was really inspired to see the film, but not the actual application on his last film. The exhibition of the same film was at movie.

What would you have done differently?

I will not change anything. Everything you see, the inspiration and some lines, and even the direction, are there for a reason.

What are your hopes about 'Jay' now that it's finally going to be seen by moviegoers in the Philippines?

I believe that the journey of making and showing the film here and abroad is already a premiere showing for us. I hope the Filipino audience would enjoy and remember the film for a long time.

I also would like to thank all the institutions that helped make 'Jay' into a reality. First, the Cinemaya Foundation. Cinemaya loaned the script of 'Jay' with the Grand Prix. They gave me the confidence to enter it to Cinemaya. Without Cinemaya, there is no 'Jay'. I would like to thank Yancy Velasco, Lauren Collins, Rickie, Ben and their staff, the CCP with Simon Japin, GC (Gladys) and Dave, and the NCCA which generously gave me a grant of P200,000 and the CCP's Lady Darnay, Christine Dapin, Laila, Simon, Digna, Santiago and their staff.

One thing I think is joining the Cinemaya is that I like the support of all these institutions. Cinemaya and the CCP did everything to support us. In fact, they even helped me find someone to borrow money from so I could push through with my shooting in Pangasinan. Ulick Garcia helped in submitting the film. It was not because of your own big dream. Still, I am excited to promote our film as a feature movie, and the CCP gives money to go to Manila, give us P100,000 more, and also give the film a grade of 'A', which means it's now a feature movie.

Can you share some behind-the-scenes about your experience directing 'Jay'?

Brown played a gay role called "Jay." He told me his father would be when he saw the film. His father told him once he played a gay role again, there was a problem. His father said that there had been a problem about playing gay again, that when he read the script, he immediately felt as if he was with the character. Brown said he was surprised to see that he was going to play a gay role and still have his father's support.

We heard in many interviews about Brown's coming-out problem. Has he ever had a hard time with him during the shoot, he was embarrassed and he even helped raise money for the film. That was how he was with the film. He also said that he was not allowed to be in the film, which gave the movie an R rating.
